

Dear Max

Will my husband Jason and I ever break through our money problems?

Karyn, Forrestfield, WA

Dear Karyn

There is a lot of love between you and Jason and that's an excellent start for a good team. This year and the coming years show promise for you. Just don't let little things such as disagreements trip you up as you both need to stay focused. Your broken life line shows that you are working through change. I also see a new source of income. A line linking your head and heart lines shows you can get sidetracked with emotions or your personal life. A good, strong plan and clear focus will get you through. I would advise you to put a ring on your Jupiter finger (index finger) which will help you with power and achievement. Your 40s will bring much better results and success for you.

Karyn replies

We are going through a lot of change right now. Jason has just taken a new job as a rigger in the mines. The money will certainly help but Jason will be gone for four weeks at a time. I need to keep a check on my emotions and remember that even though I miss him it's a good thing for our family and future.

Max is right in saying we need to stay focused and not let little things get in our way. We must stick to our plan, which is to spend the next couple of years really getting on top of our finances.
